Spoil Your Pooch at Luxurious Pet Hotel in Los Angeles!

So we just got back from a nice long vacation, and it was great to see our dog when we got home! We fortunately have a wonderful petsitter who took her in and ensured that she had as great a time as we did while we were away. But it got me thinking... where do other Angelenos leave their pets while they're away? But I'm not talking about people like us... I'm talking about the really SPOILED and pampered pets – where do they go??

Well, after some research, I found what seems to be the perfect solution for the jetsetter parents of pampered pooches. A place where their pups can relax in luxury while they are away on their yachts in the Mediterranean:

The Barkley Pet Hotel and Day Spa.

Opening in Westlake Village (Los Angeles) in Fall 2010, The Barkley promises “state of the art pet care facilities and service,” including leather furniture, flat screen televisions, and owner web cam access. A variety of pet accommodations will be available, from the $45/night Serenity Screening Suites to the $75/night Rodeo Drive “Storefront Suites” complete with leather bedding, luxury pup-themed store views, in-suite flat screen televisions, owner web cam access, and bedtime tummy rubs and bedtime stories. Of course, services are tailored to the discerning dog, including in-suite steak meals for dogs (sushi for cats), Skype or speakerphone calls to owners, vacation photos for owners, Barkley Pool Parties, Limo Rides to McDonalds for a choice of hamburger, cheeseburger, or nugget takeout (yes, really), or luxury spa visits.

Speaking of the spa, the Barkley cuts no corners. Clients can choose from options such as mud masks, pedicures (aka “pawdicures”), facial/head massages, relaxation massages, or the Celebrity Package (teeth brushing, pawdicure, mud mask, and facial/head massage). For a more exclusive experience, limousine transfers can be added to any treatment.

Jealous yet? I don't think I would mind staying there myself for a few days! Check it out yourself at their website. Also, register on their site for the facility's sneak preview weekend Saturday, October 23rd and Sunday, October 24th. See you there!
